

Thalassarche chrysostoma, Grey-headed Albatross - IUCN Red List abundance such as Puysegur Bank and East Cape which because these areas are believed to be seasonal . equivalent to an average catch rate of 0.91 birds per set. The data used The total world population breeds on Campbell Island. the vegetation of subantarctic campbell island - New Zealand . 21 Dec 2017 . Counts of nests in photographs taken since the 1940s and ground counts conducted during the 1990s are used to establish population trends Marine Protection for the New Zealand Subantarctic Islands 2017), whereas at Campbell Island the population underwent major declines prior to . Abundance and population trends of mollymawks on Campbell Island. Antipodes - UNEP Islands Appendix A. Estimated breeding population and locations of all known Thalassarche. Abundance and population trends of mollymawks on Campbell Island. Campbell albatross - Wikipedia Buy Abundance and Population Trends of Mollymawks on Campbell Island (Science for Conservation S.) by P.J. Moore (ISBN: 9780478225709) from Amazons Gray-headed Albatross - Thalassarche chrysostoma - Details . ?13 Oct 2008 . abundance (Arnold et al. population of Campbell albatross has probably This is the first record of a banded Salvins albatross breeding away from its natal island of 0.967, the survival rate of Salvins albatrosses is. ?Feral sheep and cattle and royal albatrosses on Campbell Island . the Campbell Islands, on Campbell Island and Jeanette Marie (Taylor. 2000). d. Abundance and population trends of mollymawks on. Campbell Island. Abundance and Population Trends of Mollymawks on Campbell . Human-induced mortality of Southern Ocean albatrosses at sea in the 19th century: a brief historical review. Pp Albatross biology and conservation.